Abstract. The authors present a new method for the analysis of the dynamic behavior of a system. The method is based on the use of the Laplace transform and the Fourier transform. The authors show that the method is very simple and can be applied to a wide range of systems. The authors also show that the method can be used to determine the stability of a system. The authors conclude that the method is a very useful tool for the analysis of dynamic systems.

DESIGNATED German Chancellor Angela Merkel calls the room to order with a bell prior a parliamentary group meeting of her Christian Democrats (CDU), Nov. 21 in Berlin, one day before she is due to be voted in by the Bundestag. AFP PHOTO

Germany's first woman chancellor

BERLIN—ANGELA MERKEL IS SET TO WIN broad support in parliament on Tuesday and become Germany's first woman chancellor, but her fragile coalition must prove it can contain infighting and revive Europe's largest economy.

With her government of center-right Christian Democrats (CDU) and center-left Social Democrats (SPD) holding 448 of the 614 seats in the Bundestag, the 51-year-old pastor's daughter is widely expected to get the majority she needs to be confirmed as chancellor in a vote scheduled for 10 a.m. (0900 GMT).

The vote will make her the first German chancellor to have grown up in the former communist east and bring to an end months of political uncertainty that followed an inconclusive Sept. 18 general election.

But a majority of Germans are convinced the conservative leader will not last a full four-year term because of her unwieldy alliance with the SPD of outgoing Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder.

Merkel was forced during month-long coalition talks to scrap her plans for a major shake-up of the German social welfare system that had been a cornerstone of her election program.

Revive the economy

She is vowing to resuscitate the economy, once Europe's motor but now one of the weakest in the 25-nation EU, and cut unemployment that hit post-war highs under Schroeder.

Merkel also wants to repair relations with Washington, strained by Schroeder's opposition to the US-led war in Iraq.

But she will be governing with a watered-down coalition program that suggests continuity rather than a dramatic break from Schroeder, who implemented tentative reforms himself.

"Merkel's challenge is to break the restraints of the coalition agreement while convincing the SPD that the reform course of Schroeder is being continued, not that the conservatives are having their way," conservative German daily Die Welt said in an editorial on Tuesday.

After the vote in parliament, she and her cabinet will be sworn in and formally take over from the SPD-Greens coalition government that Schroeder has led for the past seven years.

Merkel represents a generational change and a break in style from the flamboyant Schroeder, who favored Italian suits and fat cigars and seemed most at ease when in the media spotlight.

Her clinical, almost shy approach, has been mocked in the German media, but some commentators believe it is tailor-made for her new "grand coalition" that bridges right and left and will require delicate management.

"Her dislike of the theatrical in politics, of the show and big words, fits with the new sobriety of Germany's younger generation," said German daily newspaper Handelsblatt.

Like her political mentor, former Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Merkel has been underestimated throughout her career. That helped her push aside rivals in her male-dominated, heavily Catholic CDU and may play to her advantage again.

Her cabinet is dominated by pragmatists and the stability of her government could also be helped by a strong sense within the two camps in the coalition that failure would prompt voters to abandon them in any early elections.

Merkel has made cutting unemployment a top priority and the handling of this goal could determine the fate of her government.

She must hope that the central plank of her coalition program—an agreement to bring the budget deficit back within EU borrowing limits by 2007 mainly through higher sales taxes—will not get in the way of achieving her target. Reuters

US monsignor arrested for fondling boys

PHOENIX—THE FORMER VICAR GENERAL OF the Roman Catholic Diocese of Phoenix was arrested on charges he fondled boys and young men and asked them prying questions about their sex lives that he pretended were part of confession.

Monsignor Dale Fushek, 53, becomes one of the highest-ranking priests to be charged in the sex scandal that has engulfed the church. The vicar general is the highest-ranking administrator of a diocese next to the bishop.

Fushek was charged with three counts of assault, five of contributing to the delinquency of a minor and two of indecent exposure. All are misdemeanors, punishable by no more than three years and nine months in all. He was arrested on Monday.

At his initial court appearance, Fushek was placed under house arrest and ordered to wear an electronic ankle bracelet for monitoring. He also was ordered to surrender his passport and not have contact with anyone under age 18. Fushek's arraignment was set for Dec. 6.

Fushek "used a relationship of trust to perform criminal acts, including but not limited to sexual activities, improper sexual discussions and physical contact, upon vulnerable minor and adult victims," prosecutors said in court papers.

Prosecutors said Fushek committed the acts between 1984 and 1994 at St. Timothy's Catholic Church in Mesa or on property belonging to the church. The alleged victims were seven young men and boys.

Fushek resigned as pastor of St. Timothy's in April after someone claimed to have recovered a repressed memory involving sexual improprieties by Fushek in 1985. He has denied the allegations and remains on administrative leave.

Freed Aussie model advised not to sell story

SYDNEY—AN AUSTRALIAN MODEL CONVICTED of drug possession in Indonesia should not sell her story to the media as it could jeopardize other Australians facing drug charges in the archipelago, a former federal judge said Tuesday.

Underwear and catwalk model Michelle Leslie, 24, arrived in Australia on Tuesday after serving three months in a prison on the Indonesian resort island of Bali for having unlawfully obtained two ecstasy pills.

Leslie wore traditional Muslim dress during her trial but emerged from jail in a midriff-baring singlet top, leading to accusations in Australia that she staged a sham commitment to Islam to win sympathy from Indonesian judges.

Former Federal Court Judge Marcus Einfeld said Australians on trial in Indonesia could pay if Leslie said anything in a tell-all memoir that indicated she had tried to hoodwink the Indonesian justice system.

"If this woman humiliates the Indonesians, the next person who gets into trouble in Indonesia will suffer greatly," Einfeld said.

"The idea that she may have falsely taken on Islam, and I don't know whether she did or not, ought to be played very quietly indeed."

As Leslie's representatives shop her story around to the highest bidder, Prime Minister John Howard said he did not believe she should benefit financially from her crime.

"Many Australians, including me, do not believe that she should profit from telling her story," he said.

Australia has laws preventing convicted criminals from profiting by telling their story and Howard said authorities would examine any deal struck by Leslie's handlers.

Howard said Canberra had asked Indonesia to consider Australian domestic sensitivities as they prosecuted a series of high-profile drug cases involving Australians, including former beauty student Schapelle Corby and the so-called "Bali Nine," alleged heroin traffickers.

He said the Indonesians should expect the same courtesy.

Figure 1 consists of 16 micrographs arranged in a 4x4 grid. The rows represent different treatments: Control (0, 1, 2, 3 hours), 100% NaOH (0, 1, 2, 3 hours), 100% NaOH + 100% H₂O₂ (0, 1, 2, 3 hours), and 100% NaOH + 100% H₂O₂ + 100% H₂O (0, 1, 2, 3 hours). The columns represent time points (0, 1, 2, 3 hours). The Control row shows a clear bacterial lawn that increases in opacity over time. The 100% NaOH row shows no growth at 0 and 1 hour, but a lawn appears at 2 and 3 hours. The 100% NaOH + 100% H₂O₂ row shows no growth at 0, 1, and 2 hours, but a lawn appears at 3 hours. The 100% NaOH + 100% H₂O₂ + 100% H₂O row shows no growth at 0, 1, and 2 hours, but a lawn appears at 3 hours.

Figure 1. The effect of the concentration of the Agrobacterium suspension on the transformation efficiency of Agrobacterium strains. The Agrobacterium strains were grown in YEA medium for 24 h at 28°C. The cell concentration of the strains was adjusted to 10⁸ cells/ml. The strains were then mixed with the plant cells and cocultured for 48 h. The transformation efficiency was determined by the number of GUS-positive cells per 10⁵ cells. The data are the mean ± SD of three independent experiments.

ice shortage in 2010

The United States is expected to face a significant ice shortage by the year 2010, according to a report by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA). The report states that the amount of ice in the Arctic region is expected to decline by 50% by 2010, which could have a major impact on the global climate. The report also notes that the melting of ice in the Arctic could lead to a rise in sea levels, which could threaten coastal cities and infrastructure. The report calls for increased research and monitoring of the Arctic region to better understand the impact of climate change on the ice. The report also suggests that the United States should take steps to reduce greenhouse gas emissions to help slow the rate of climate change.

Away with acne in 4 easy steps

HOW TO GET RID OF ACNE: Acne is a common skin condition that affects about 85 percent of people. It's caused by a combination of factors, including hormones, genetics, and bacteria. The skin's pores become clogged with oil and dead skin cells, leading to pimples.

Step 1: Wash your face twice a day

Washing your face twice a day with a gentle cleanser can help remove dirt and oil from your skin. Use lukewarm water and pat your face dry with a clean towel.

Step 2: Apply treatment

After washing your face, apply a treatment product to your skin. Look for products that contain ingredients like salicylic acid, benzoyl peroxide, or retinoids. These can help unclog your pores and reduce inflammation.

Step 3: Moisturize

After applying treatment, moisturize your skin. This helps keep your skin hydrated and prevents dryness. Look for non-comedogenic moisturizers that won't clog your pores.

Step 4: Avoid triggers

Acne can be triggered by certain factors, such as stress, diet, and hormones. Try to identify and avoid these triggers to prevent future breakouts. Also, avoid picking at your skin, as this can lead to scarring.
